The Italian Textile Industry A Key Economic Sector

Italy's textile industry is currently undergoing a transformation, balancing between modernisation and technological advancements. While the majority of the manufacturers are small in size, this has not been an obstacle to their development as most of them are located in an industrial district.

Thanks to the collaboration of the district to which it belongs, each company can specialise in a specific activity, such as spinning, weaving or finishing. In this way, production is differentiated, as in a large, vertically integrated company.

Moving forward, industry must address two crucial issues: the evolution towards a sustainable production system and digitisation of the supply chain.

Read The Italian Textile Industry for insights into the main sectors and the future of the industry.

Worldwide Challenges Call for an Increased Automation Process in Home Textiles Production

A higher level of automation across the entire textile and apparel supply chain is the key to higher efficiency, productivity and performance. However, there is no “one-size-fits-all” solution. The approach is to look at current manufacturing processes and establish where automation can make the biggest difference. Christian Moore, CEO, ACG Kinna Automatic, shares how his company is well placed to assist the home textiles industry transition to automation.

Libraries of Digital Weaving Excellence

Digitalisation is driving the development of new technologies for Belgium’s machine builders. Digitally-enabled smart factory production machines can talk to each other and make a lot of new features possible. Weaving, however, is never just a matter of numbers, parameters and settings, but also relies on the intuition, experience and gut feeling of the expert weaver, says Stijn Pauwels, Manager, Belgian Textile Machinery Association (Symatex).
